To Run For Tucker Death

Tucker Death Sat.

Lexington, July 29.—Harry St. George Tucker, representative from the tenth Virginia district, died at his home here this Saturday night.

Critically ill for ten days, the 79-year-old Virginia ran in the national congress weakened noticeably in the few days and his death from a heart attack was not unexpected.

Since early in the last session of congress when a severe attack of pneumonia had forced him to withdraw from home here, the tenth district representative had been in feeble health.

Expressions of regard for his passing were heard from among his colleagues and intimates who praised him as a statesman and a man schooled in jurisprudence, and as a devout churchman.

In manner he was lovable and gracious," said Governor Pollard, "while he was a Congressman. Tuck was dead. "In loyalty to principle he was unyielding and inflexible.

"A distinct loss to the house," said Representative Rainey, the democratic leader under whom Mr. Tucker had served.

Funeral Services Monday.

Funeral services were held at Lexington Monday afternoon at a special senate and house committee at the residences to honor their former colleague.

The rites which were at 5 o'clock from Congressman Tucker's home were conducted by Dr. J. Murray, pastor of the Lexington Presbyterian church of which the tenth district representative was a member. Henry St. George Tucker, of Richmond, a cousin of the congressman, assisted in the services.

Burial took place in the family plot.

Active pallbearers were: Stuart Moore, W. S. Hopkins, Jr., W. H. Campbell, Jr., W. P. Dixon, Jr., Dr. M. White, Robert H. Hutchings.

The tenth district representative was one of the eight who have sat in the same congressional district since 1890. Four of the same family were representatives from Virginia, and a fifth, Thomas Tudor Tucker, a representative from South Carolina, was a relative of the Virginia line.

Of Distinguished Family. The Tucker family in Virginia has been distinguished in war and peace, in the legal profession and in affairs of state and national government since the period of the revolution.

The Virginia family of which Harry St. George Tucker represented the fourth congressional district, was founded by George T. George Tucker, who was born on the Isle of Bermuda, July
